Johann Vanhall

Born in Bohemia in 1730 resided chiefly at Vienna

The spirited natural and unaffected symphonies of this expellent composer seem to have preceded those of Haydn, at least in England

His quartetts and other compositions for violins certainly disere a place among the first productions in which the unity of melody pleasing harmony and a free manly style are constantly preserved

Of his writings that have have been published there are several symphonies quartets trios duets and solos and some sets of sonatas for the harpsichord

Part of his second sonata in D major and part of his second in the ninth Opera are inserted as specimens of his compositions in Dr Croth's publications

He died at Vienna in the year 1813
